Series 1: Subject Files

This series contains rhetoric and English courses taught by Sleator, including assignments, exams, bibliographies, lectures, and notes. The series also contain notes on grammar and rhetoric, "Pleasure Dome" - a poem written by Sleator Temperley and a publication rejection letter from Scientific American, and Sleator's talk to the Cambridge University Linguistic Society in 1963. Also included is a list of publications from members of the Institute of Communications, with two of Sleator's unpublished works listed, and (most likely) Sleator writing about her experiences as a teacher of English as a second language labeled "Institute Report." There are a few records of the Department of English and Department of Linguistics, including, course listings, staff directories, requirements for a master's of arts in the teaching of English as a second language, and some faculty biographical information.
