Series 6: Revelations from the Russian Archives: Historical Russian Documents, 1917-1994

This series contains photocopies of historical Russian documents published in Revelations from the Russian Archives (1997) and contains Library of Congress booklet about the "Revelations from the Russian Archives" 1992 exhibit. This exhibit was one of the most important ever organized by the Library of Congress: it displayed previously secret primary source materials that are essential to understanding the tumultuous history of the USSR in the twentieth-century and represented a public effort by the Russian government, following the fall of the USSR, to affirm free democratic access to information. Professor Koenker was the substantive editor of the subsequent 1997 Revelations from the Russian Archives: Documents in English Translation, which includes documents from the exhibit along with additional papers selected by a curatorial team in Moscow. Most archival documents included in the 1997 publication were translated in their entirety; whenever sections were omitted this was indicated by [...] in the book. To allow researchers to access the complete documents, photocopies of the entire original documents and their translations are preserved in this series. The series is arranged by professor Koenker's coding system.
