Temira Pachmuss Papers

Temira Pachmuss, a Professor of Slavic languages and literatures at the University of Illinois (1961- 1999), was born in Vask-Narva, Estonia, and educated in Germany, Australia, and the United States. Temira Pachmuss devoted her career to the work of Russian writers who fled the Soviet Union after the Bolshevik Revolution in 1917 and took up residency all over the world. Temira Pachmuss is widely recognized for her work on Zinaida Hippius, an influential Russian symbolist poet.

Tatiana Manukhina Papers

Tatiana Ivanovna Manukhina (1885-1962) was the wife of the well-known St. Petersburg doctor I. I. Manukhin. She studied at the Pedagogical Institute in St. Petersburg, and after graduation worked for several years in Paris under Professor Durkheim on sociology and primitive religions. Encouraged by Maksim Gor'kii, she started her literary career in 1913. The Manykhins left Russia in 1921 and settled in Paris, where Manukhina took an active part in various welfare and church organizations. She continued to publish under the pseudonym T. Tamanin. Her first novel Otechestvo (Fatherland) appeared in 1933. Manukhina's second book Sviataia blagovernaia kniagina Anna Kashinskaia (St. Ann, the Devout Princess of Kashin) was published in 1954.

Anna Hippus' Papers

Anna Nikolaevna Hippus (1872-1942), was one of Zinaida Hippus's three younger sisters. After the Revolution she fled Soviet Russia (their two other sisters, Tatiana and Natalia, stayed there for the rest of their lives) and settled in Paris. Although Anna Hippus studied medicine in Russia and practiced it for several years, in emigration she made her living on final preparation of Russian writers' manuscripts. She also wrote and published (under the pen name Anna Giz) her own works. In 1927 she published a hagiography of St. Tikhon Zadonskii (Sviatoi Tikhon Zadonskii). Her diary "Obitel' Solovetskaia" (The Cloister of Solovetsk) appeared posthumously in an abridged form in Vozrozhdenie (1959, No. 83).

Zinaida Hippius Papers

Zinaida Nikolaevna Hippius (1869-1945) was born into the family of the super-procurator of the St. Petersburg Senate, and was educated mostly at home. She started out as a successful short-story writer, and later developed into one of the most significant Russian symbolist poets. She was also a first-rate literary critic and essayist, publishing under the pseudonyms Anton Krainii, Roman Arenskii, Lev Puschin, and some others.

She married Dmitrii Merezhkovskii, four years her senior, in 1889. Their literary careers proceeded independently, although their political, philosophical and religious views were in unison.

Hippius initiated the Religious-Philosophical Meetings in St. Petersburg (1901-1903) and the publication of a literary journal Novyi put' (1903-1905), which printed the works of symbolist writers and published the reports of the Religious-Philosophical Meetings. Among Hippius' and Merezhkovskii's closest associates at that time were Dmitrii Filosofov, Vasilii Rozanov, Nikolai Berdiaev, Aleksandr Blok, Andrei Belyi, Fiodor Sologub, Anton Kartashov, as well as Hippius' two younger sisters, Tatiana and Natalia Hippius.

In 1919 Hippius and Merezhkovskii (along with their secretary V. Zlobin and D. Filosofov) left Soviet Russia via Poland. Together with Boris Savinkov they tried to organize military opposition to Bolshevism in Poland, but their attempts failed. In 1920 the Merezhkovskiis and Zlobin left Warsaw and settled in Paris, where Hippius continued her literary activities, contributing to various émigré periodicals. In 1925 Hippius published her reminiscences Zhivye litsa (Living Faces). In 1926 the Merezhkovskiis organized a literary and philosophical society, "Zelenaia Lampa" (The Green Lamp), where the discussions centered on literary, religious, and political matters. Hippius' volume of poetry Siianiia (Radiance) appeared in 1938. Her book about her husband, Dmitrii Merezhkovskii, was published posthumously in 1951.

Personal correspondence

Adamovich, Georgii: 2 items, including 1 photocopy of Hippus's letter to Adamovich and 1 typewritten copy of the same letter.

Georgii Viktorovich Adamovich (1884- 1972), a critic and a poet. He left Soviet Russia in 1922 and settled in Paris. He was an active contributor to various émigré periodicals, and was considered one of the major Russian literary critics abroad. He published several books of poetry, among them Oblaka (Clouds), 1916, Chistilishche (Purgatory), 1922, Na Zapade, (In the West), 1947, and two books of critical articles and essays Odinochestvo i svoboda (Solitude and Freedom), 1955, and Kommentarii, 1967.

Artsybashev, Mikhail: 2 items, 1924. 2 letters to Hippus, concerning personal and political matters (photocopies).

Mikhail Petrovich Artsybashev (1878-1927), a prose writer, an author of the novel "U poslednei cherty" (1912). In 1923 he left Soviet Russia and settled in Warsaw, actively contributing to the anti-Bolshevist newspaper Za svobodu, edited by D. Filosofov.

Bunin, Ivan. 46 items, 1921- 1933. Z. Hippus' letters, postcards, and notes to Bunin, concerning domestic affairs, literary matters, Russian émigré literary life, mutual friends and acquaintances. (Published by T. Pachmuss in Cahiers du mond russe et soviétique, 1981, no. 4.)

Ivan Alekseevich Bunin (1870-1953) began his literary career in 1888, and soon achieved a reputation of the major Russian prose writer. In 1920 he left Soviet Russia and settled in France. In the emigration Bunin wrote some of his most important works, such as his fictionalized autobiography "Zhizn' Arseneva" (The Life of Arseniev). He was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature in 1933.

Bunina, Vera. 36 items. 1924-1944. Z. Hippius' letters and postcards to Bunina, concerning domestic affairs, Russian émigré literary life, mutual friends and acquaintances.

Vera Nikolaevna Bunina, nee Muromtseva (1881-1961), -- the second wife of I. A. Bunin, the author of the book Zhizn' Bunina: 1870-1906 (Life of Bunin: 1870-1906), Paris, 1959.

Filosofov, Dmitrii: 2 items. 2 letters from Z. Hippius to Filosofov, the first of Nov. 26, 1904 and the second of Sept. 13, 1905, concerning personal matters. Handwritten copies, made by Zlobin, who also indicated that the originals of these letters were sold to Mikhailov (?).

Dmitrii Vladimirovich Filosofov (1872-1940) was a journalist and critic for the famous symbolist periodical Mir iskusstva (The World of Art, 1899 -1904). He became an intimate friend of the Merezhkovskiis', who contributed regularly to Mir iskusstva, and a member of Hippius' religious group. In 1919 he escaped Soviet Russia together with Merezhkovskii, Hippius, and Zlobin, but settled in Warsaw. He was an editor of the Russian newspaper in Warsaw Svoboda (Freedom).

Kartashev, Anton. 28 items, 1906-1908. Letters to Hippius and Merezhkovskii, concerning religious and literary matters, as well as his relationship with Hippius' younger sister Tatiana, whom he wished to marry. (Published by T. Pachmuss in Intellect and Ideas in Action. Selected Correspondence of Zinaida Hippius, Munich, 1972, pp.649-705.)

Anton Vladimirovich Kartashev (1875-1960), graduated from the Theological Academy in St. Petersburg. He worked in the public library in St. Peterburg and gave lectures at the Women's University (1906-18) on the history of religion. He was President of the Religious Philosophical Society in St. Peterburg in 1909, the last Procurator of the Holy Synod and first minister of Religion in the Provisional Government. After his emigration, he became a professor at the Theological Academy in Paris. He was the author of many books dealing with the history of religion.

Dmitrii Merezhkovskii Papers

Dmitrii Sergeevich Merezhkovskii (1865--1941) was a prominent Russian writer and religious philosopher. His literary corpus includes poetry, novels, dramas, critical essays, and translations from several languages. Merezhkovskii's European fame, however, rests primarily on his historical novels, first of all, on his trilogy Christ and Antichrist (1896 --1905).

Merezhkovskii came from an aristocratic family and was educated at the Historical-Philological Faculty of the University of St. Petersburg. In 1889 he married Zinaida Hippus and they settled in St. Petersburg.

Merezhkovskii's second book of verse Symbols (1892) and his treatise "On the Reasons for the Decline of, and on New Trends in, Contemporary Russian Literature" (1893) made him a leader of the new movement called "decadent" or "symbolist." In the late 1890's Merezhkovskii, by then more a novelist and critic than a poet, turned from Nietzscheanism to Christianity. Merezhkovskii, Hippus, and Dmitrii Filosofov developed the concept of a "church of the Holy Flesh and the Holy Spirit," in which they sought to integrate the life-affirming traits of Greek paganism into Christian spirituality. In 1901 Merezhkovskii, Hippus, and D. Filosofov founded the Religious-Philosophical society of St. Petersburg.

Two editions of Merezhkovskii's Collected Works appeared in 1911-13 and 1914, and many of these works were translated into various European languages.

The Merezhkovskii's were among first Russian writers who actively opposed the Bolshevik regime. In 1919 they (along with their secretary V. Zlobin and D. Filosofov) left Soviet Russia via Poland. Together with Boris Savinkov they tried to organize military opposition to Bolshevism in Poland, but their attempts failed. In 1920 the Merezhkovskii's left Warsaw and settled in Paris, where they continued to play an important role in the intellectual and literary life of Russian emigration. Merezhkovskii remained an extremely prolific author for the rest of his life. Works written in emigration include Napoleon (1929) Messia (1928) Taina Zapada. Atlantida -Evropa (The Secret of the West. Atlantis-Europe, 1930), Iisus Neizvestnyi (Jesus, the Unknown, 1932-34), and books about Dante, Francis from Assisi, Jeanne d' Arc, St. Augustin, and St. Paul.

Vladimir Zlobin's Papers

Vladimir Ananievich Zlobin (1894-1967) was born in St. Petersburg. He was a student of law at the St. Petersburg University when he became interested in poetry. As a young author he was introduced to Dmitrii Merezhkovskii and Zinaida Hippus, and shortly afterwards became Hippus' personal secretary. He joined the couple when they fled Soviet Russia in 1919 and settled in Paris. He continued to work for them as a secretary, simultaneously publishing his own poetry and essays in Russian émigré newspapers and journals. Zlobin was a member of the editorial boards of several literary journals, among them Novyi korabl' (The New Ship, 1927-- 1928) and Vozrozhdenie (Renaissance, 1949 --1974). After the death of Merezhkovskii (in 1941) and Hippus (in 1945) he became the executor of their estate. Zlobin inherited Hippus' and Merezhkovskii's archive (part of it was acquired later by A.Ya. Polonskii, the antique dealer from Paris), as well as copyrights on their literary works. Zlobin's first volume of poems entitled Posle eio smerti (After Her Death), dedicated to Hippus appeared in 1951. His book Tiazhelaia dusha (The Difficult Soul), which contained his memoirs on Hippus and some general reflections on her life and work, was published posthumously in 1970.

Articles about Merezhkovskii, Hippus, and other Russian émigré authors, about Russia, and on some other matters (mainly from Russian émigré press, such as Vozrozhdenie, Russkaia Mysl', etc.)

Articles about Boris Savinkov case, 1924-25 (mainly from Russian émigré press). (Boris Viktorovich Savinkov (1879-1925), pseudonym V. Ropshin, was a revolutionary who opposed both the imperial and the Soviet regimes in Russia. He wrote several novels based on his career as a terrorist. After the Bolshevik Revolution, Savinkov established a clandestine military organization, the Union for the Defense of the Fatherland and Freedom, which organized an uprising in Iaroslavl' (July 6-21, 1918). After the uprising failed, Savinkov went to Poland, where (together with Merezhkovskii and Hippus) he tried to organize military opposition to Bolshevism, but President Pilsudskii's peace with Soviet Russia put an end to this activity. Savinkov went to Paris to solicit Allied intervention against the Bolshevik government. In 1924 Savinkov was tricked into returning to the U.S.S.R., and was immediately arrested. He received a death sentence, but the next year he was stated to have committed suicide in prison.)

Other authors' poems, prose, etc.: 8 items, including Anatolii Alfiorov's presentation at the meeting of "Zelenaia lampa"; General Malyshkin's presentation in Paris, 1943, concerning Vlasov's movement; poems by Sergei Esenin, Mikhail Kuzmin, Iu. Mandel'shtam, Boris Savinkov, an unknown author; fragments from Anna Or's typewritten manuscript "Kitaiskie teni" (Chinese Shadows), later published in Vozrozhdenie, No. 60, 1956.

Franco Mazzoni's drawing, 1 item.

Photographs: 3 items, including 2 photos of W. Ulbrich, and 1 of a dog.
